

EVERY FATHER AND EVERY MOTHER desires the happiness of their children. For many of them, it is one of the chief purposes of their life: its what they live for. They work for their children, plan for their children and, especially if they are Catholics, pray for their children. They know that the happiness of their children will depend largely upon choice of a right vocation. They know that the choice of vocation should not be left to chance. It is too important. The proper choice depends upon the aptitudes; talents; physical, mental and moral attainments; and possibilities of the boy and girl, particularly the interests, inclinations, or desires.
